Doing Business in the House of God: Negotiation Space between Worship and Economics on Friday Prayer

Abstract This article describes about negotiation space between worship and economics on Friday prayer at Masjid Ulul Albab (MUA) Medan. The main focus on this research is the appearance of pedagang kagetan (sudden traders) on Friday pray laying down their merchandises such as worship equipments, Moslem clothing, meal, snack, mineral water, etc around the mosque. The findings of this articles is the phenomenon where there is there is a change function of the mosque becomes a market. To understand the phenomenon, there are two questions appear: what are the factors that contribute to the negotiations of worship and the economy and how the practice of economic progress. This paper explains that the factors pushing this situation because there is "blurring" between the room of worship and economic boundaries. Thus there is dominance of economic in the worship space. It happens because there is mutual need between merchants and pilgrims. It is done to meet the needs of the merchant family.

Introduction Friday prayer is an obligation that should be done observed by every Moslem once a week, that is on Friday. It has a normative doctrine of Islam, especially in the scope of Islamic law. Implementation of Friday prayer is something important, at least it can be seen the mosque is always crowded with pilgrims-who enthusiastically-to do so. The enthusiasm in practicing Friday prayer seems very important compared by another prayer: subuh, zuhur, asar, maghrib and isya. It can be seen in every mosque that there are many pilgrim coming to do Friday prayer. due to the belief that this ritual has significance for the pilgrims. The pilgrims considers Friday prayer has a social meaning. The practice of Friday prayers in its development is no longer simply understood just a mere religious practice, but it becomes part of the cultural practices of Islamic society.
